

President's Message

Faye Moses

WGI President

WGI has always demonstrated an extreme level of commitment to its employees and customers. We have worked hard to get a near equal commitment in return. However, there are times when I get the distinct feeling that there is an imbalance in this commitment. So many times we put forth more than a 100 percent and the more we deliver, the more obstacles we face. To our employees, I say, use common sense and good judgment in all things. Put yourself on the other side and think of the impact your short-term action has in the long run. Remember to listen twice more than you speak and to only complain to the person who can do something about it.

To our customers we ask that we are given an opportunity to perform the job at hand without the distraction of corporate politics, personality conflicts and personal agendas. We are committed to providing the best solution at the best possible price. We must run our business as a business, with decisions based upon the overall company, not on one particular instant. We offer a full company for your support and one individual has never stooped WGI for supporting you in the best possible manner. Faces change, our commitment stays the same.

I welcome your thoughts and comments at faye@wilkins.com. We must all thank God, for we are truly blessed.
